WeRateDogs Twitter Analysis

By: Monica London

Introduction

WeRateDogs is a Twitter account that rates dogs in submitted photos. It has an unusual rating system; most dogs are rated more than 10/10! Some submitters also specify whether the dog is a 'doggo', 'pupper', 'puppo', or 'floofer.'

I analyzed tweets from the birth of WeRateDogs at the end of 2015 through July 2017 and discovered some interesting insights.

How has the activity of WeRateDogs changed over time?

WeRateDogs hit it's height in activity shortly after it began at the end of 2015. It experienced a dramatic decrease in activity at the beginning of 2016 and has leveled off at between 38-85 tweets per month.

Does WeRateDogs and the Twitterverse agree on how funny a dog is?

Both retweet count and favorite count correlate modestly with rating. This is unsurprising; human behavior is difficult to predict.

What are these silly dogs named, anyway?

Approximately 71% of tweets included the dog's name.

The most popular names are as follows:

1. Charlie
2. Oliver, Lucy, Cooper (tie)
3. Tucker, Penny (tie)

But even if your dog is named Charlie, don't despair. Only .8% of dogs from the WeRateDogs tweets are named Charlie.
